

The Oggie distressed oak floor with its distinctive knotty, weather-beaten look, used in the restaurant and bar area, provided the perfect link between the indoor and outdoor environments.

Oggie's intriguing range of surfaces and choice of plank widths and lengths in their engineered hardwood floors impressed Matthew. His final choice for the restaurant was selected for the abundant "read" in its planks, and its vivid life and character.

The stable 3-layer construction and environmental soundness of the Oggie Oak wide-plank wooden floors, finished on site with Woca natural cold-pressed oils from Denmark, fit the character of the hotel, which is designed to be robust and environment-friendly.

Belon Restaurant & Bar, Atlantic Beach Hotel, Melkbos

"The floors and overall design for the Atlantic Beach Hotel were intended to be casual yet definitely needed to be sophisticated," says the architect, Matthew Cooke of Design Matters.
