

It began with a fire

After two renovation experiences, Matthew dreaded having to live through the inconvenience, frustrations and delays all over again. Little did he know just how much his luck would change!

Only the roof burned, but the fire hoses did more than put out the blaze in Matthew's Tamboerskloof, Cape Town home. His Victorian home's original Oregon floors were totally ruined.

But his life changed when neighbours offered him their home during the crisis. It was there that he met their house-sitter Miree, a designer who has since brought new design, insight and love into his home and life.

In their extensive search for flooring options the new couple visited CarpetMax Paarden Eiland, Cape Town where they fell in love with the unusually broad (150mm x 890mm) French Oak Herringbone, as well as an Oggie broad oak plank.

"I was thrilled with the flooring and the installation team. I wish all suppliers could make projects so simple. They understood their products and what was realistically achievable," said Matthew.

"So it's definitely third time Renovation Lucky," he said.

"Now we have quality Oak flooring which creates a better base for our new, simpler, more modern and less cluttered life together."
